Life Skills & Job Skills Instruction Solutions

Transition Portfolios & Employability

Showcasing employability skills using a Transition Portfolio can be especially important for students in life skills programming. Potential employers may overlook qualified individuals simply because they don't have a diploma. Transition Portfolios showcase work evaluations and provide concrete examples of job skills to make students more attractive to potential employers.

Establishing a transition portfolio is as simple as creating tangible assignments and projects for students. Providing quality hands-on job experiences and life skills is crucial to help students realize their potential!

We were honored to have Jennifer Casselman speak about Transition Portfolios during our March Webinar Wednesday. Jennifer had excellent insight to share from her experience as a Transition Academic Teacher at Center Grove Community School in Indiana. To listen to Jennifer's important solutions for Job Skills and Life Skills instruction Click Here.

Implementing Real-World Career Activities in the Classroom

From Jennifer's experience, using a hands-on approach to introduce job skills in the classroom can be extremely effective. This can be accomplished with three steps:

- Introduce the curriculum and methods of training.
- Demonstrate the steps to completion.
- Practice with students in a safe and supportive space. Expanding the practice to their community is a great way to give positive exposure and experience to the students while helping their local communities.
